Hands

Mine are slender and large, with nails too long.
Tools, not for display, but for picking away and prying apart
and for fishing in small crevices and they are dry, caused by an otherwise-occupied mind.

My mother's are dry and large, but well-rounded with short nails
Wise, caring, meticulous and elderly.

My brother's are short, but strong and free of cracks
They may not be weathered, but they are well-trained for modern tasks.

My father's are large like mine, but well-worn, with well-kept nails.
He is a hard worker, though he is sometimes anxious.
He, too, is wise like my mother, but his mind tends to drift.

Cracks, Lines, Creases, and Scars
These are the marks we leave through our lives
What do your hands say about you?
